HOST GUIDE

How to run the night

Before the party

- Print the Questions (host copy) and the Answer Key for yourself only. Keep the key face down.
- Print one set of Team Answer Sheets per team, one Score Sheet, and enough Bingo Cards for each guest (every card is different).
- Gather pens or pencils, a timer or phone, small prizes if you like, and bingo markers (coins, beans or wrapped candies work well).
- Make teams of two to six people. Mixed ages and mixed knowledge make the best teams.

Running a round

1. Announce the round name. Rounds are themed, so the name is a hint of what is coming.
2. Read each question twice, slowly. Give teams about 20 to 30 seconds to agree on an answer and write it down. No phones.
3. After the last question, have teams swap sheets, then read the answers aloud from the key. Teams mark each other's work with a tick.
4. Add up the round on the Score Sheet and announce the standings before you start the next round.

Spelling does not matter. If an answer is close but not the same as the key, the host's ruling is final, so decide quickly and smile.

Pacing a whole evening

A round takes roughly 5 to 12 minutes, depending on its length. Play four rounds for a one-hour party or all 6 for a full evening. A bingo game between rounds gives everyone a stretch, a snack and a chance to chat. Pick the rounds your group will enjoy most: they are independent, so you can play them in any order.
